There is a pretty legend in connection with the Bismark family, which goes to show how the oak leaves adorning the Bountk shield were added to the clover and nettle leaves. It runs as follows: Many years ago there was a lovely young maiden, Gertrude Von Bennark Numbers of noble knights and courtiers sought her hand and heart, but she was by own consent and father's wish betrothed to a cousin, a noble and princely youth. One day there princely youth. One day there came to the castle where the beautiful Gertrade lived, a prince of the Wendon, with a hundred horsemen, to try to win her. She courteously but firmly refused him. The prince was greatly enraged, and incited by her great leveliness determined to gain her; so be called his warriors and said he would break the clover leaf (Gertrode) with his own hand. On the same day he assailed the castle, which was but weakly defendand the Wendo entered the castle and then the maiden's chamber. more he withdrew it, crying out, "Mercy!" Gertrude held a dagger ov r him, then stock it in his heart, saying, "The nettle stings hard whoever will break or tinch Bismark's golden clover. Since then Bismack's shield wears the oak leases as a sign and crown of victory. --Landon Temes
